

Daniel Hellinger spoke about the results of the elections held in Venezuela on Sunday, February 15, 2009. In the election, Venezuelan president Hugo Chávez won a referendum that removes constitutional limits to his indefinite re-election.

Daniel Hellinger spoke February 16, 2009, on "How Red is the Pink Tide in Hugo Chávez's Venezuela?" at the Mershon Center for International Security Studies. About 60 people attended.

Thomas Walker (left), Professor Emeritus of Political Science at Ohio University, speaks with Daniel Hellinger (right), Professor of Political Science at Webster University. Both Walker and Hellinger are speakers in the Latin America in the Global Scenario series, co-sponsored by the Center for Latin American Studies.

Daniel Hellinger (left) pictured with Abril Trigo (right), director of the Center for Latin American Studies at The Ohio State University. Trigo's center co-sponsors the Latin America in the Global Scenario lecture series, which brought Hellinger to Ohio State.